Stratton honors resident 'ironmen'

On the not quite final day of the 2007/2008 season, time was taken to honor the mountain's loyal guests who make the mountain what it is.

As the snow fell outside and costumed individuals mulled about in preparation for the afternoon's Pond Skim event, hundreds of Stratton's local residents and season pass holders gathered in the west wing of the base lodge for a BBQ feast and awards ceremony to honor Stratton's most-dedicated skiers and snowboarders.

If you could do anything for 100 days out of the year what would it be? Century Club award winners Tom Goodman, Bernard Heller, Mark Katzman, Steve Obletz, Rolf Ochsner, and Albert Trachtenberg chose to ski!

The century club recognizes individuals who ski more than 100 days in a season. This is no easy task, requiring good health, a large time commitment, and a serious dedication to the mountain and the sport. In 2007-2008 Stratton Mountain was open for skiing or snowboarding a total of 147 days, meaning Century Club members had to ski at least 68% of the skiable days this year!

Stratton Mountain would like to thank all of its visitors, particularly its loyal guests and season passholders for another fantastic season!
